

3,000 RUSSIANS FALL IN A TWO-DAY BATTLE

Mikado's Troops, Too, Suffer Dreadful Losses in the Extended Fight That Resulted in the Still Further Falling Back of Gen. Kuropatkin's Forces.

With the Enemy Pressing Him on Three Sides the Russian General Must Repulse the Attack or His Army Will Be in a Position That Will Mean Its Annihilation.

HARBIN, Manchuria, Aug. 29.—The Russian losses in the great two days' battle, east and south of Liaoyang, were 3,000 killed or wounded. The great majority of the casualties were sustained at Anping.

The withdrawals of the Russians from their front at Anshanshan and from their eastern position were made simultaneously for strategic reasons.

MUKDEN, Aug. 29.—In the fighting of Aug. 26 the One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Saraisk Regiment, with a battery, executed a particularly successful flanking movement on the Japanese extreme right. The Russians, unperceived, got in the rear of the Japanese, whole columns of whom were mowed down before they were able to extricate themselves.

Eye-witnesses agree in admiring the fanatical bravery of the Japanese. Many of the wounded committed suicide rather than fall into the hands of the Russians.

An additional detachment of six hundred Russian wounded was sent northward Sunday.

GREAT BATTLE IS RESUMED TO-DAY.

LIAOYANG, Aug. 29, 8 A. M.—The Japanese artillery resumed the battle at 6 o'clock this morning, the point of pressure again being the Russian south front. The Japanese infantry is now advancing to attack, the regiments being deployed in open order.

The Russian army has effected its retirement, with transport and artillery, to Liaoyang, and is now in position awaiting the advancing Japanese. The progress of the latter has been rapid and determined, the troops sparing no sacrifice.

In the attack on the Siaolandy position one Japanese battalion lost all of its officers.

The retirement of the Russian transport of four corps yesterday evening across the plains while the artillery and troops in the rear held off the Japanese afforded a magnificent spectacle. All along the extended lines there was an incessant roar of batteries, the Russians working their guns with great coolness and not retiring until the transport was in safety.

Gen. Ronkowsky was among the killed.

RUSSIANS PRESSED BY AN ARMY OF 250,000

LONDON, Aug. 29.—Despatches received here to-day say that Gen. Kuropatkin's entire army south of Liaoyang has retreated to that place.

The Japanese, numbering 250,000 men, under Gen. Oku, Nodzu and Kuroki, are pressing the Russians to the east, south and southwest, trying to force a general engagement.

The Russians are contesting every inch of the ground and there is severe fighting in progress to-day. Gen. Kuropatkin has sent provisions north and is retiring toward Mukden.

RUSSIANS ATTACKED AT THREE POINTS.

A despatch to the Daily Mail says:

"After a reconnaissance in force made by the Japanese on Friday they decided that a general advance should be made. So their reserve divisions, which occupied Litindian and supported the reconnaissance, were ordered to the firing line. They made a forced march and the Russian front was attacked in three places.

"The Japanese" infantry advanced under the cover of a tremendous artillery fire and attacked the Russian line with great courage, and they climbed hills like the Gurkhas. They were met with a murderous hail of magazine fire, but numbers prevailed, and, with ringing shouts, the Japanese cleared the heights with the bayonet, inflicting terrible losses on two Russian regiments.

"This success initiated a general retirement in all parts of the Russian line. The centre had been driven in, and the flanks therefore fell back.

"At Anshanshan the Russians had a stiff task, but held the Japanese off, and retreated in good order. In two parts of the field the Japanese were repulsed.

JAPS FIGHTING UNDER SEARCHLIGHTS.

"The Japanese halted twelve miles from Liaoyang, but subsequently retired two miles in bivouac.

"The Russian main position is now eight miles out of Liaoyang. They occupy trenches already prepared for them.

STOESSEL SEES NO HOPE AHEAD.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 29.—It is reported from a reliable source that Lieut.-Gen. Stoessel, commander of the Russian military forces at Port Arthur, has telegraphed to the Emperor thanking him for the recent message of encouragement sent to the garrison of Port Arthur, saying that the defenders of the fortress are ready and willing to lay down their lives. He adds that the garrison has already suffered severely and intimates that it is hardly possible to hold out for more than a month or six weeks.

PORT ARTHUR HASN'T FALLEN.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—A St. Petersburg despatch to a news agency says that the mother of Major-Gen. Fock has received a message from the General, who is one of the Russian commanders at Port Arthur, saying that the Russian have plenty of stores, and adding that the fortress will not surrender.

The date of the despatch is not given.

POLICE CAUGHT IMMIGRANT.

Man Ordered Deported Who Escaped Is Landed in Jail.

Word was received by the immigration authorities at Ellis Island to-day from the police of the Mercer street station that Harry Hardin, an immigrant who had been ordered deported, had escaped on Aug. 9 from the American line ship, just before he was to have sailed for Europe, has been found by them.

Hardin arrived here in July, and after an examination it was decided that he was not fit material for an American

CRY OF "BLOOD" SCARES HIS WIFE

Family Troubles of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Albert, of Brooklyn, Bring Out Curious Testimony of Razors on Mantel.

WEIRD LETTERS READ FROM WITNESS STAND.

In Them Albert Rails at Christian Science, Talks About a Crazy Dutchman and Denounces Rhine Wine.

Christian Science, divine healing, blood on the face of the moon, razors on the mantelpiece, more blood, Rhine wine and a profusion of indigo adjectives marched into the marital troubles of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Albert, of No. 370 Tompkins street, Brooklyn, to-day when Magistrate Higinbotham heard the testimony of husband and wife and an eighteen-year-old daughter.

When the case was first ushered into court Mrs. Albert charged her husband, who has a small book store in Brooklyn, with abandonment. He counter-claimed that Christian Science had caused his wife from her home, and that life was unbearable with her. When the case was called Mrs. Albert was requested to take the stand. She is a small woman with flashing eyes and extremely red cheeks and heavy eyebrows. When she mounted the witness chair she had in her hand a bundle of letters that when read caused a sensation in the court-room because of their originality and a weird texture of phraseology that punctuated them.

Fearful Her Husband.

"These letters," said Mrs. Albert, excitedly, "and razors on the mantelpiece caused me to fear for my life. Mr. Albert also had a terrible way of saying 'blood!'"

Upon the request of the Court Mrs. Albert read the letters with many gestures. At times her voice rose to a high soprano pitch and at other times fell to a sepulchral depth.

The first letter was dated July 15. It was not addressed to any one, but Mrs. Albert testified that she and her daughter Allen had found it upon the dining room table. It ran:

"Don't leave the gas burning in the hall tonight. If I don't get home put the key in the closet. Allen, you must stop lying to me. Your Christian Science teaching under the tuition of the Lewis avenue reverend has done wonders for you. The ——— him and everybody connected with him."

The blanks were not in the letter, as they were not in the letter, but the Court advised their substitution as there were many women in the room.

"I have given you a little good advice before taking my departure for good next morning. This is not needed as you will tell the story. I am not an ass or a ——— fool, and intend to build myself up with health and fortune. Be careful of the pennies and don't go wild."

The second letter was also found in the dining-room table. While reading it Mrs. Albert became slightly hysterical, and the Magistrate directed her lawyer to finish it for her. It read:

"I have had to throw away the small box of razors that you gave me. I am now alive with small water bugs all over them on the window sill. This is the way I am treated when I put out my money."

"I went out and bought my dinner last night. There was nothing in the house and I will buy my dinner after this I am going to sell. Christian Science and divine healing are most wonderful! There is blood on the face of the moon. Beware of the stone!"

This remarkable epistle was not signed. The third and last letter that was read was dated July 15. It was addressed to whom it was a concern. It follows:

"June 15, 9:30 P. M.—The undersigned has gone to Coney Island. Put the key in the outside closet hall. Don't leave any light in the hall. How the hell are you to-night? I am a fool to be made a foolhead of. I paid out $22 to-night to battle for four weeks in my money."

"The undersigned has gone to Coney Island. Put the key in the outside closet hall. Don't leave any light in the hall. How the hell are you to-night? I am a fool to be made a foolhead of. I paid out $22 to-night to battle for four weeks in my money."

100 DIE IN FIRE IN PHILIPPINES

City of Binang Swept by Flames and 5,000 Residents Left Homeless—Government Aids the Sufferers.

MANILA, Aug. 29.—The city of Binang, in Laguna Province, island of Luzon, has been destroyed by fire. One hundred persons perished in the flames and five thousand were rendered homeless. The loss is estimated at $400,000.

The Government is furnishing shelter and food to the people made destitute by the fire.

According to the census of 1896 Binang had a population of 7,353.

TO SETTLE M'VICKER ESTATE

Chicago's Public Administrator Wants to Take Charge.

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—A petition has been filed in the Probate Court by Public Administrator Strong asking that he be appointed administrator of the estate of Harriet S. McVicker, widow of James H. McVicker.

It is asserted in the petition that Mrs. McVicker left no will. The estate is estimated as amounting to $250,000.

MRS. ROBERT ALBERT, HER DAUGHTER AND HUSBAND IN COURT.

insurance ahead. A — fool I am for spending my money on you. To hell with you. Get out. Blood! Blood! Blood! This letter was also without a signature.

Admits Writing Letters.

The bookseller admitted writing the letters and said that he did so in a fit of terrible passion. He said he was willing to provide for his wife and daughter.

When Miss Albert got on the stand and declared that her father gave her only $2 a week, the defendant jumped to his feet and shaking his fist at her roared:

"I'll smash you for that, for I gave you more than $2."

He was suppressed from further exclamation by a court officer and the case was adjourned.

HUNGARIANS HERE ON WAY TO FAIR

Sixty-one Members of Reichstag, Many Accompanied by Families, to Attend International Parliamentary Congress.

Sixty-one members of the Hungarian Reichstag arrived in New York to-day on board the Cunard liner Slavonia. The majority of the deputies were accompanied by their families and many friends. They are on their way to St. Louis to take part in the International Parliamentary Congress which they were invited to attend by the United States Government.

The party will remain at the Waldorf-Astoria this week until the arrival on the Lucania of Count Albert Apponyi, who heads the delegation. Upon his arrival they will travel to St. Louis by special train.

The majority of the delegates are members of the Hungarian nobility. There are many strikingly beautiful women in the party. When the Slavonia arrived the Hungarian deputies and their families were met at the pier by the Hungarian Consul and many distinguished members of the American aristocracy.

The delegates came by the Mediterranean route, and when the Slavonia arrived at New York they were met by the Hungarian Consul and many distinguished members of the American aristocracy.

Among the distinguished noblemen who make up the party are Count George Karolyi, one of the richest men in Austria-Hungary; Count and Countess Etienne Bethlen, Aristide Dessewsky and daughter, who is married to a member of the party, and Baron Louis Pirel-Bihani.

Forty-five members of the Association of Electrical Engineers, who are being entertained here by the American Institute of Electrical Engineers before they go to St. Louis to take part in the International Electrical Congress at the Fair, were treated this afternoon to a display of the work of the New York Fire Department in Union Square.

After it was all over the visitors declared that the show beat anything they had ever seen like it before, in spite of the fact that an unruly horse quivered loose and soaked most of them before they could dodge out of the way.

100 DIE IN FIRE IN PHILIPPINES

City of Binang Swept by Flames and 5,000 Residents Left Homeless—Government Aids the Sufferers.

MANILA, Aug. 29.—The city of Binang, in Laguna Province, island of Luzon, has been destroyed by fire. One hundred persons perished in the flames and five thousand were rendered homeless. The loss is estimated at $400,000.

The Government is furnishing shelter and food to the people made destitute by the fire.

According to the census of 1896 Binang had a population of 7,353.

TO SETTLE M'VICKER ESTATE

Chicago's Public Administrator Wants to Take Charge.

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—A petition has been filed in the Probate Court by Public Administrator Strong asking that he be appointed administrator of the estate of Harriet S. McVicker, widow of James H. McVicker.

It is asserted in the petition that Mrs. McVicker left no will. The estate is estimated as amounting to $250,000.

GIRL FATALLY BURNED.

Annie Handelman, seven years old, of No. 26 East One Hundred and Second street, while playing around a bonfire built by some boys in front of her home to-day caught fire and was so badly burned that she may die.

James Fallon, of No. 220 East One Hundred and Second street, grabbed the child when she was a mass of flames and held her while a Policeman John J. Brennan threw his heavy coat around her and smothered the fire. Both men were burned about the hands and face. The child was removed to the Harlem Hospital.

KEPT PET DOG IN LINER BATH TUB

Kroonland Passengers with Valuable Canines Protest Against Partiality Shown Mrs. F. T. W. Palmer, of Chicago.

OTHER DOGS WERE HERDED IN THE SHIP'S KENNELS.

Son of Hjalmar Boyesen, Author, Permitted to Give His Two Prize Winners an Airing on Deck.

The Red Star line steamship Kroonland, which arrived to-day, brought in a large cargo of pet dogs which were not only a source of trouble to their owners, but caused the ship's officers much unpleasantness.

Mr. and Mrs. Algernon Boyesen returned after having paid a visit to the Duchess of Sutherland in London. Mr. Boyesen brought over with him two French poodles, trimmed and with artistic knots of hair. They were Lolot and Pompon, both prize winners. He also brought over London Boy, a three months' old bull-pup.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. W. Palmer, of Chicago, brought over a wee bit of a terrier, Too Too by name, and referred to by some disrespectfully as the animated sponge. Mrs. Willie Coburn, the wife of the jockey, was accompanied by a ten-inch dachshund who answered to the name of Helne.

Julie Van Der Velde, a member of the Chambre des Representants, had on board a blue ribbon retriever.

Kept His Dog in Bath Tub.

The Red Star line charges $10 per dog and the animals are provided with quarters in the room with the steam-heating gear. They are fed by the ship's butler. As soon as the passengers boarded the vessel at Antwerp their pets were taken from them and placed in the ship's kennels.

There was a tendency to draw the social lines in the ship, which was manifest soon after the Kroonland left port, and this was intensified when it became known that Mrs. Palmer had succeeded in prevailing upon Capt. Dorr to allow her to keep "Too Too" in her room. This was granted on the promise to keep her toy pet in the bath tub.

Immediately there was trouble. Those who were not fortunate enough to have bath tubs were indignant, and there were demands that the officers allow other dogs in the cabins. This was refused.

Boyesen Was Favorite.

In the mean time Mr. Boyesen, who is the son of Hjalmar Boyesen, the author, had made an investigation of the way the dogs were kept on board and discovered that the temperature of their quarters was so warm that, in his opinion, the dogs would die before the end of the trip. In spite of the orders on board he took his pets out on deck and spent the greater part of the time exercising them on deck.

Mrs. Coburn made a trip across the steers deck to locate "Helne" and she, too, had complaint to make. She was sure "Helne" would die, for she made the alarming discovery that he had been fed on cheese.

Up on deck and in the saloon the social war was waged, and it is declared that some of the women would look off at the distant horizon and make audible remarks about the social standing and wealth of those who were within hearing.

Jealousy, Says Mrs. Palmer.

Mrs. Palmer was not backward in saying on her arrival that there was a great deal of jealousy because she was allowed to keep "Too Too" and she intimated that some of those on board thought they were quite capable of "stirring" the captain and running the ship.

That there were the "meanest" lot of persons on board and that they had had the worst trip they had ever made was the opinion of both Mr. and Mrs. Boyesen.

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

"I came over in this line," said Mr. Boyesen, "because of the law in England against dogs and because I was assured that they had first-class kennels. I was not treated well by the ship's officers and had to take my dogs out to get the air myself, for they had been left in the hot room in which the common dogs were kept. I am sure they would have died. Every day I took them up on the upper deck back of the bridge and let them see the sun. There was no railing there and they might have fallen overboard."

SAD MIX-UP IN THIS POST-OFFICE

Federal Inspector Finds Hundreds of Letters Mailed Months Ago Hidden Under Sofas and Carpets.

SOME DUST-COVERED ONES JUST DELIVERED.

Inquiry at Linoleumville Discloses Astonishing State of Affairs Preceding Retirement of Miss Decker.

Probably the most remarkable case of loss of letters committed to the United States mails that the Post Office has ever had to handle is being uncovered by Postal Inspector Thomas Fuller in the little post-office at Linoleumville, Pa. He has brought to light from under carpets, out of sofas and holes in the wall and from all sorts of niches and crannies in and around the building more than 300 letters that were mailed in the office or received there months ago.